Local 495 in September, 1961, but that the employees knew they were members of a union and that they did know this transfer took place.

The number of SCHEIB workers belonging to Local 886 were few (approximately 100) and the dues collected by them over a two year period ($84,260) did not seem of great enough magnitude to warrant any large payoff from HOFFA to DORIA (CSLA 4350-C estimated $250,000) although the SCHEIB contract was Local 886's largest and it does not seem logical that they would give it up for nothing. It was indicated, however, that the possibility exists in the future that the Teamsters may grant a charter to Local 886.

As far as RICHARDAKAVNER obtaining a loan and putting up borrowed stock as collateral in an attempt to hide the percentage of pay off he received on the SCHEIB deal, investigation showed that he did receive a loan but the collateral (stock) was in his name and had been in his name for a year or two prior to the SCHEIB deal and that the loan was paid off through the sale of some of the same stock.

SCHEIB and KAVNER did fly to San Francisco in the SCHEIB company's plane on 7/18/61 to meet with JAMES RIDDLE HOFFA to talk over the transfer of SCHEIB workers in Southern California from Local 886 to Local 495 and to give SCHEIB a chance to talk to HOFFA concerning the possibility of his opening up new shops in Northern California with Teamster contracts, but this would not be considered unusual taking into consideration Mr. SCHEIB's idea of having all of his shops under one international union. (Review of records show that the majority of SCHEIB's shops throughout the country were represented by Teamster Locals up to two years prior to the transfer of the Southern California shops from Local 886 to Local 495.)

Mr. SCHEIB admits to meeting ANTHONY DORIA at Colf Delmonico's Restaurant on one occasion with PETE LENTINE and others whom he does not recall and may be on one or two other occasions but there is no way of knowing at this time how many times or how well SCHEIB does know DORIA.
